The affair took p'a e in the presence of the Convention Committee, with whom were Generals Gregg, Rawlins, Bodeau, Porter, Comstock, Dant, and Bai cock; also Colones Parker, Webster, and Lee, of the General's statt.

Atter a few minintes' conversation Gen, Grant extended a cordial invitation to the committee to be present at his residence this evening on the occasion of the formal presentation of his nonlination by the National Convention.

The committee then left the General's hadquarters for the Capital, to offer their congulational to Speaker Colfax. A' 2 o'clock the committee were received by Mr. Colfax in the Speaker's room of their congratulations to Speaker Colian. At 2 o'clock the committee were received by Mr. Colfan in the Speaker's room of the Capitol. After greeing the committee with his customery confulity and listening to a lew remarks by Col. Alliman, Mr. Colfan responded briefly. He sliuded, in striking terms, to the perils by lend and sea which were endured by the voldiers and sailors of the Union in detence of the Constitution and Hag of their country.

Gen. Hawiey then addressed Speaker Collax: You have heard our declaration of principles at Chicago, and, therefore, I used not repeat them. You are aware that numerous candidates for the Vice Presidency were presented. They were all loved and respected, and your selection was brought about hy the good will and friendship enterlained for yourself. You are known to the American people hy tenriency search to public service. We know yon come from the people, and without false pretense you are fai hind to principle. The Convention tenders you the nomination of Vice President, asking your acceptence. [Applause.]

To this Mr. Collax replies:

Mr. President Ill weley and Gentlemen: History has already proclaimed that the valencies of the parity you represent during the receut war always gave increased theps and confidence to the nation, while is reverses and defects ever increased the national peril. It is no elight tribute, therefore, to the millions of Republicans in the forly-two States and ierritories represented in the Chicago Convention, that our organization has been so inseparably interwoven with the best interests of the one have been the triumphs and reverses of the other.
